AMAZINGLY LOW COST REPLICA GRATINGS

You Can See

All the Colors of the Spectrum

The passage of a system of light waves past the edge of an obstacle is accompanied by a phenomenon known as diffraction. While light is broken up into the colors of the spectrum, Rulings of thousands of lines per inch have been made on glass to produce diffraction gratings. High price replicas of these have been made for years. Diffraction Gratings have been used to answer more questions about the structure of the material world and the universe than any other single device. Now, we bring you film transmission Replica Gratings at a very, very low price. This film has 13,400 lines per inch running the long way. The film is 8 inches wide, about 7½ inches covered with replica lines. Thickness about .005". Dispersion about 24°. Use it for making spectrosopes, for experiments, as a fascinating novelty. It’s new, it’s really wonderful! Order today. You and your friends will be amazed! Comes in clear plastic protector.

Brainpower
for the brawny
Nike-Hercules

The Army's newest surface-to-air guided missile—the lethal Nike-Hercules—is now operational. Because it is, no unfriendly plane will be able to fly sufficiently high, fast or evasively to escape a fatal rendezvous with it.

For Hercules has a "brain"—an intellect that makes it a prodigy among today's electronic robots. Bell Telephone Laboratories developed it. Western Electric (prime contractor for the entire missile system) is producing it. Douglas Aircraft Company is giving it its body.

This "brain" is a fully integrated guidance system, almost entirely land-based. Only the vital signal-receiving apparatus is expendable within the missile itself. Other highly practical features: it defies "jamming," is completely mobile, is designed in separate "building block" units which are replaceable in seconds—and is deadly accurate.

Bell Labs scientists and engineers designed the world's largest and most intricate telephone communications network for the Bell System. They developed about half of the Armed Forces' radar equipment during World War II. And they pioneered the nation's first successful air defense guided missile system—Nike-Ajax.

They were eminently qualified to give Hercules the brainpower it needed.
