Editorial
Rebutting the Preposterous ................................................... 1163

Articles
Dons or Crooners?: E. Ashby ...................................................... 1165

Popularization is needed not to bring science to intellectuals but to bring it to the great majority.

The Uintathers and the Cope-Marsh War: W. H. Wheeler .................. 1171

This feud is an interesting but unfortunate part of the history of science in 19th century America.

An Archeological Pilgrimage to Santiago de Compostela: M. B. Rogers .......... 1176

Romanesque European ornament of the 12th century suggests the probability of Indian influences.

Notes on the Reviewing of Learned Books: G. Sarton .......................... 1182

Good books, bad books, scholarly books, popular books, all pose problems for the conscientious reviewer.

Modern Science and the Intellectual Tradition: G. Holton .................. 1187

The dissociation of science from the rest of our culture has deep-seated causes and disturbing implications.

Science Reporting—Today and Tomorrow: J. Troan .......................... 1193

It’s better than you may realize, but improvements are needed—and here’s how they’re being achieved.

Science in the News
Cuts in Funds for Stanford Accelerator More Apparent than Real; United States Launches Two More Satellites ............................................. 1198

Book Reviews
W. W. Rostow’s The Stages of Economic Growth, reviewed by T. Geiger ........ 1201

Economics and Social Sciences ..................................................... 1205

Physical Sciences ........................................................................ 1212

Biological Sciences ...................................................................... 1218

Departments
History of Technology: Forthcoming Events; New Products ................ 1246

Letters from J. E. Michaels; T. L. Noffsinger and L. R. Holdridge; W. S. Jarnagin and K. O’Brien; A. Calvin and W. J. Michelson; O. Struve ........ 1260

Cover
Fragment from the cloister of St.-Etienne at Toulouse (about A.D. 1120). See page 1176.