The American Association for the Advancement of Science was founded in 1848 and incorporated in 1874. Its objects are to further the work of scientists, to facilitate cooperation among them, to improve the effectiveness of science in the promotion of human welfare, and to increase public understanding and appreciation of the importance and promise of the methods of science in human progress.

Figures and objects of the same physical size appear different when their apparent distances differ as a result of a "projected" stimulus for distance. This illusion is one instance of the class of size illusions resulting from manipulation of distance stimuli which normally preserve perceptual constancy. See page 1335.
