* The American Association for the Advancement of Science was founded in 1848 and incorporated in 1874. Its objectives are to further the work of scientists, to facilitate cooperation among them, to foster scientific freedom and responsibility, to improve the effectiveness of science in the promotion of human welfare, to advance education in science, and to increase public understanding and appreciation of the importance and promise of the methods of science in human progress.
COVER  Skeleton of a colony of the cheilostome bryozoan Steginoporella magnilabris. Features of individual modules (zooids, each about 1 millimeter long) that are preserveable in the fossil record are sufficient to discriminate between morphospecies that breed true and are genetically distinct. Thus paleontologists can study evolutionary patterns at the species level in this group. See page 579.
