The American Association for the Advancement of Science was founded in 1848 and incorporated in 1874. Its objectives are to further the work of scientists, to facilitate cooperation among them, to foster scientific freedom and responsibility, to improve the effectiveness of science in the promotion of human welfare, to advance education in science, and to increase public understanding and appreciation of the importance and promise of the methods of science in human progress.
COVER  Adélie penguins (Pygoscelis adeliae), shown here at a rookery on Torgerson Island near the U.S. Antarctic science base Palmer Station, are a vital link in the Southern Ocean food web. Respiration of carbon dioxide by Antarctic birds and mammals may represent a significant inefficiency in the storage of fixed carbon in the ocean. This phenomenon may affect current models of the global ocean-atmosphere carbon flux. See page 64. [Photograph by David M. Karl]
