Exploring the questions of science and education for the future is the theme of AAAS'93 in Boston from 10 to 16 February 1993. The program of scientific sessions spans the sciences, highlighting the year's advances and speculating on tomorrow's discoveries. A special symposium focuses on educational programs that aim to elevate scientific literacy and train young scientists to find answers for the future. See page 1511 for a complete program and registration information.
