SCIENCE • VOL. 260 • 28 MAY 1993
All of science is driven by unanswered questions, but in AIDS research 10 years after the discovery of the AIDS virus, there are many more questions than answers. In a special section beginning on page 1253, Science offers several different views of the most important questions in the field, from a survey of 150 AIDS investigators to provocative views from leading researchers. The only remaining question is: When will there be answers?
