Jupiter Bombardment Now Certain, but How Big a Show!

Biomedicine in the Age of Imaging

Molecular Electronics: Observation of Molecular Rectification

Hydrodynamic Stability Without Eigenvalues

Malaria: Focus on Mosquito Genes

Insect-Borne Viruses: Help From Plants

Bacteria May Provide Access to the Tsetse Fly

A Sub Surveillance Network Becomes a Window on Whales

Listening to the Earth Move

New Chemicals Seek to Outwit Insect Pests

Board of Reviewing Editors

American Association for the Advancement of Science

Downloaded from http://science.sciencemag.org/ on April 12, 2017
Adult female Anopheles gambiae mosquitoes, the principal malaria vector in Africa. A sex-linked recessive mutation that changes the wild-type (right) eye color to white (left) has been mapped genetically on the X chromosome. See page 605 and the News story on page 546. [Photo: Jim Gathany, Centers for Disease Control Photoservices]