COMPUTERS, COMMUNICATIONS, AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST

Edited by MARTIN GREENBERGER

Are computers agents for good or evil? Do they free or restrict us? Can they constitute an invasion of privacy? And how should their use be regulated?

Based on a symposium at which lectures by eight specialists were the subject of discussion by such notables as Alan Perlis, Wayne Morse, Charles Schultze, Ralph Nader, and Harvey Brooks, Computers, Communications, and the Public Interest comes to grips with some of the most hotly debated issues of our times. $12.50
