Research for the World Food Crisis

"... there is no equivalent collection of the separate contributions of plant science, animal science, soil science, and agricultural engineering to the phenomenal increases in post-World War II agricultural productivity."—American Scientist, January-February 1972, p. 91.

Fifteen distinguished scientists conclude that new methods and techniques will make it possible to meet the food needs of the world's rapidly increasing population throughout the 21st century.

Arid Lands in Transition

Scientists from 14 countries assess the changing conditions, the potential for development and possible solutions to problems of development of arid regions in 15 countries around the world.

Aridity and high temperatures are dominant environmental factors for one-third of the world's land surface. Once looked upon as an easily exploited natural resource, the arid regions now are seen to need careful development if their great potential for mankind is to be realized.
